Excerpts from the Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen (1789)

Approved by the National Assembly of France, August 26, 1789

_	Articles:	Explain the Articles:
	1 Men are born and remain free and equal in rights. Social distinctions may be founded only upon the general good	1
	4 Liberty consists in the freedom to do everything which injures no one else; hence the exercise of the natural rights of each man has no limits except those which assure to the other members of the society the enjoyment of the same rights. These limits can only be determined by law	4
	6 Law is the expression of the general will. Every citizen has a right to participate personally, or through his representative, in its foundation. It must be the same for all, whether it protects or punishes.  All citizens, being equal in the eyes of the law, are equally eligible to all dignities and to all public positions and occupations, according to their abilities, and without distinction except that of their virtues and talents.	6
	7 No person shall be accused, arrested, or imprisoned except in the cases and according to the forms prescribed by law	7
	8 The law shall provide for such punishments only as are strictly and obviously necessary, and no one shall suffer punishment except it be legally inflicted in virtue of a law passed and promulgated [broadcast] before the commission of the offence.	8

9 As all persons are held innocent until they shall have 9 been declared guilty, if arrest shall be deemed indispensable [necessary], all harshness not essential to the securing of the prisoner's person shall be severely repressed by law. 10 No one shall be disguieted on account of his opinions. 10 including his religious views, provided their manifestation does not disturb the public order established by law. 11 The free communication of ideas and opinions is one 11 of the most precious of the rights of man. Every citizen may, accordingly, speak, write, and print with freedom, but shall be responsible for such abuses of this freedom as shall be defined by law... 13 A common contribution [taxes] is essential for the 13 maintenance of the public forces and for the cost of administration. This should be equitably distributed among all the citizens in proportion to their means. 14 All the citizens have a right to decide, either 14 personally or by their representatives, as to the necessity of the public contribution [taxes]; to grant this freely; to know to what uses it is put; and to fix the proportion, the mode of assessment and of collection and the duration of the taxes. 17 Since property is an inviolable [unbreakable] and 17 sacred right, no one shall be deprived thereof except where public necessity, legally determined, shall clearly demand it.
